

Beautiful New Beginning

© 2011 Radha Sahar - for Ruby

The summer heat is fading. She says
'Gran – it's gardening weather'
We plant some kale and cavolo
Gather the pumpkins in
She's humming a sweet little song
There's a feeling of forever
We've all we need in a morning fresh and new

This is life how it's meant to be
Simple contentment and harmony
And like I recall my Gran, will she remember me
On a peaceful autumn day with not a breath of wind?
As a wide blue sky sings
A beautiful new beginning

We come indoors, wash our hands
And while Gran prepares dinner
She draws a picture of the sky
With a rainbow in the corner
The sun is bright in her world
It warms the coming winter
We're kindred souls
Together on this earth
This is life how it's meant to be ...

She's my little pumpkin, now asleep
I gaze at her skin – it seems to glow
She's snuggled in a soft, pink rug
On the floor beside my bed
There's a shiver in the air
I pull her covers over
She'll be going home tomorrow bathed and fed

This is life how it's meant to be
Simple contentment and harmony
And like I recall my Gran, will she remember me
On a peaceful autumn day with not a breath of wind?
Not a breath ...
She is my beautiful new beginning
